Special Ingredients

- Blueberry extract: The blueberry belongs to the heather family. It grows mainly in forests, heaths and moorlands, as an evergreen, strongly branched shrub. The plant grows up to 60 centimetres high and can live for up to thirty years. From July to September it bears the well-known black-blue berries as fruit. In traditional folk medicine the blueberry is still held in high esteem. Hildegard von Bingen already knew about its healing properties in the Middle Ages and was the first to describe its medicinal properties. The plant was used for stomach and lung problems as well as for coughs. Blueberry leaves are also considered to lower blood sugar.
Effect: The blueberry extract is used in cosmetic products mainly thanks to its refreshing, astringent and invigorating effect.
- Blackcurrant extract: Blackcurrant contain many valuable substances such as potassium, calcium, phosphorus, pectin, many fruit acids and vitamins. Their vitamin C content is the highest of all garden fruits. Blackcurrants are considered particularly healthy due to their high vitamin C content. It has a very high antioxidant effect and protects the cells from oxidative stress. The extract has a calming effect and reduces the loss of elasticity of the skin. Through care with blackcurrant extract, the skin usually becomes supple and smooth and is kept in good condition.

Application

In the morning and evening, place 1 - 2 pumpfuls in the palms of the hands and apply the product to moistened skin. Massage over the entire face and rinse off with plenty of lukewarm water.
